

Chevron Engineering Project Management Fellowships

OpenHours Eng. Project Management Peer Mentoring

Purpose and Goal

The purpose of the Chevron Corporation Project Management Fellowship is to identify outstanding engineering students who are interested in learning more about project management and getting them engaged in teaching, research, campus-outreach activities, and other community-based projects.

The goal of OpenHours Eng. Project Management Peer Mentoring program is to provide a financial support for undergraduate engineering students who are enrolled in the minor program and would like to become OpenHours peer mentors.

OpenHours peer mentors are undergraduate engineering students that assist fellow engineering students utilize fundamental project management principles and tools to better organize and manage projects. The eligible projects for OpenHours peer mentoring range from capstone design classes and class group-term projects to student-led community outreach efforts such as The Big Event and Engineering without Borders projects.
